Library Building Committee's Report.

TO THE TOWN OF EXETER:—The following report of the library building committee is respectfully submitted.

Your committee was appointed at an adjourned town meeting, May 14, 1892, to take down and rebuild the old county building so far as its materials would allow for a library building.

We met and organized June 25, 1892, with Hon. Charles H. Bell as chairman and Charles H. Knight, Esq., as clerk.

After examining the descriptions of many library buildings and visiting some in Massachusetts and elsewhere, we accepted plans amended to suit the limit of the money at our disposal, furnished by Messrs. Rotch & Tilden, of Boston, architects.

In response to our advertisements for proposals we received several bids, from among which we accepted that of Messrs. Kelly brothers, of Haverhill, Mass., builders, and executed a contract with them April 27, 1893, to build the new library, using the materials of the county building, so far as possible, according to the vote of the town.

As the work progressed, we invited competition for such parts of it as were not included in the builders' contract, as a result of which, contracts were awarded to Messrs. Getchell & Taylor to furnish the plumbing; to the Somersworth Machine Co. to furnish the heating apparatus; to the Exeter Gas Light Co. to furnish the gas fixtures; to Messrs. Greeley brothers for the memorial tablets, and to Snead & Co. Iron Works of Louisville, Ky., to furnish shelving.

By the terms of the original contract, the building was to have been completed, ready for occupancy, November 15, 1893.

There was some delay in getting possession of the county building, so that work could not be commenced until about June 1, 1893. Afterward, there were many and vexatious waits, caused by failures of certain parties who had bargained to furnish materials, and by strikes among workmen in various quarters where materials were in process of manufacture.

The new library was therefore not open for use until September 24, 1894.

In compliance with our invitation, Moses N. Collins Post, G. A. R., appointed a committee, consisting of Messrs. George W. Gadd, Alfred J. Gilman, William H. Colcord, Irving M. Watson and William P. Tilton, to confer with us in relation to the Soldiers' Memorial, and from them we received valuable assistance, especially in preparing and arranging the list of names (which were published in the local papers) to be engraved on the tablets.

Much of the labor of the committee from our preliminary studies, until the new structure was well advanced toward completion, devolved upon our chairman, Mr. Bell, and to his constant, faithful, painstaking service and his wise counsels and suggestions is due a very large share of the credit for the beautiful and commodious public library which we now enjoy, and which will, we believe, be increasingly a source of delight and satisfaction to the people of Exeter. He was a good citizen, a good man, in every department of life. His death, Nov. 11, 1893, was a public loss and we render no perfunctory tribute in expressing here our sense of personal loss and bereavement.

Prof. Bradbury L. Cilley was elected chairman, Nov. 20, 1893, and as thus organized your committee has finished its work.

The town had appropriated and expended for the lot purchased of the county, $3,500.

The appropriation for the new building was, $15,000 00
For furniture, 1,500 00

There has been expended under our direction, $16,500 00
$16,596 80

This will appear in detail in the Treasurer's report.

The excess above the appropriation ($96.80) was nearly all used for advertising, surveying lot, grading, cleaning, water and incidental expenses not fairly chargeable to the building or furniture.

In addition to the above amounts, there was given by the Exeter Library Company, the sum of $969.96, which was expended under the supervision of Prof. Cilley, for the mosaic floor, decorative painting and ornamental work, and an oak book case for the Bell collection of books. There is still a small sum in the hands of that company, which will doubtless be expended for the library in some appropriate way.

We think we may congratulate the town upon the possession of a substantial and satisfactory library at reasonable cost, and an appropriate memorial to its citizen soldiers.

Chief Engineer's Report.

In compliance with the law, I respectfully submit my third annual report, as Chief Engineer of the Fire Department, giving account of alarms and fires for the past year and condition of apparatus under my charge.

There have been eight alarms during the year.

April 1, at 8.30 A. M., brush fire in the Oaklands. No damage.

May 2, at 5.40 P. M., brush fire in the Oaklands. Damage slight.

May 3, at 2 P. M., fire in Oaklands. Damage, $400.

May 4, at 9 A. M., brush fire in Oaklands. Slight damage.

July 18, at 5 P. M., tenement house belonging to L. Nealey, in Conner field, opposite depot. Damage $100; covered by insurance.

July 29, at 5 P. M., farm house and buildings of Gilman Barker. Damage, $4,000; partially insured.

September 6, at 2 P. M., brush fire on land of Lyford Conner, Newmarket road. No damage.

September 23, at 2 A. M., fire at South Newmarket. Steamer sent down and did good work, playing through 1500 feet of hose.

January 7, 1895, no alarm; the old Town Farm buildings belonging to James Pike. Total loss, $1,600. No insurance.

The apparatus under my charge is in good condition, with the exception of hose, and I would respectfully recommend the purchase of 1000 feet.

A room is being fitted up in the old town hall building for the Hook and Ladder truck, at a small expense. I think it could not be improved upon for convenience.

I desire to again express my thanks to the public, the Assistant Engineers and the firemen, for their prompt attention to duty.

Respectfully submitted,

GEO. H. GOOCH,

Chief Engineer.

The Robinson Seminary.

PRINCIPAL'S REPORT.

HON. BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF ROBINSON SEMINARY :

Dear Sirs:—With a single exception the corps of teachers in our Seminary is the same as in several past years. The same devotion to the best interests of the school, unanimity of feeling and purpose, earnest desire to further the measures and efforts of the principal have characterized the labors of my associate teachers during the past year. Weeks and months of quiet, progressive, fruitful work in the school room have been the result. The condition of the Seminary is hopeful and healthful. The devoted friends of our school have great reason for thankfulness for the character and spirit of our Seminary girls. There are dull and frivolous girls among our number. But I have taken great pains to assure myself that a careful search among the public and private schools of New England would fail to find another school of its size with fewer undesirable members. The fidelity and devotion of the pupils are a constant encouragement to me and my associates in our efforts for the true growth of our school.

The opening of the new school year in September was marked by an exceptional increase of numbers in the Academic Department. By borrowing desks and chairs from the Preparatory Department, we were able to furnish the additional accommodations. There are now seated in the Academic room one hundred pupils.

The course of study is undergoing extensive but gradual modification. This has been made desirable by many circumstances—the newer ideas of the requisites of an education, and in the College Preparatory department the greatly increased requirements for admission to girls' colleges.

In the preparatory and academic courses a progressive course in literature has been arranged covering eight years. The study of English History is now begun in the fifth year, anticipating the course formerly given in the senior year, in order that the historical knowledge may be made available in English literature work of the last three years. In the sixth year the history of Greece and Rome will be pursued. The proposed historical work of junior and senior years is the Mediæval and Modern History of Europe. Time for these new subjects is secured by curtailing the science work. I hope to add to the studies in the senior year either Astronomy or Geology.

The greatly increased requirements for admission to college place a heavy tax upon our teaching force as well as the endurance of our pupils, especially if they attempt to keep along any of the literature, history or science subjects of the regular course, as many desire to do. It is very important that parents shall formulate definite plans for their daughters' education early in the academic course. It is unwise for girls to pursue the college preparatory course unless it is quite certain to be followed by a full college course. The college preparatory course can never be as educative and helpful as the regular academic course for the girl who finishes her school life on graduation from the Seminary. On the other hand, it is impossible for a girl to obtain a good college fit who decides to enter upon the preparatory work for college later than the sixth year. Girls who expect to enter college must devote all their time, and with the closest application, for the last three years of the course to preparatory work, omitting all subjects of the regular course except such as are actual college requirements. The mathematics of the two courses are identical through the sixth year. During junior and senior years, it will be necessary for the college girls to devote from two to three hours per week to advanced and original work in algebra and geometry. Advanced classes in mathematics have this year been organized in the college department.

It is now time that our academic course be enriched by some system of elective and optional studies. I think it will be better to make vocal music and drawing optional studies after the completion of the grammar course; to allow during the academic years only those pupils who show a special taste for and proficiency in music and drawing to take those subjects; to allow those pupils who are prepared for them to pursue either or both subjects further than at present, including, in the art course, water color and oil and modelling work. The work in both those courses will then be subject to the same examinations and required attainments as other studies and allowed to count for a diploma in place of a literature, language or science study.

Any considerable option in subjects requires much additional labor on the part of teachers. The need of more teaching force in the academic department is now very imperative. The extreme need and my own taste and fondness for that kind of work have led me to give almost the entire time of every day to classroom work. At the same time I am aware that this is not the wisest course. Two-thirds of the principal's time at least, during the hours of the school session, should be given to the general interests of the school, to the unification and harmonizing of the work in the different departments, to a daily following of and sympathy with the work of every teacher, and to a watchfulness over the spirit and tendencies of the school. In this connection I desire to pay a tribute of gratitude to my assistant, Miss M. E. Irvine, whose prompt efficiency and untiring industry in the office work, in the laboratories, and in every department of the school alone render it possible for me to devote the time to teaching that I now do. But it will be an imperative necessity in the near future to devise some plan by which more hours of instruction can be afforded to the pupils of the academic department.

Another very great need that we must supply soon is an intelligent and systematic supervision of the physical condition of our growing girls, and a system of physical training adapted to the individual needs of each girl, under direction of an educated and experienced teacher of physical education.

The enrichment of our curriculum with new courses in literature and history with their requirements of research and reading on the part of each pupil, places upon me the necessity of improving the efficiency of our reference library. The present library is being rearranged and classified subjectively for the greater convenience of those consulting it. But we stand in very great need of more books and standard works of reference. It has been my plan adhered to for several years past, to build up the library by my own personal exertions, without asking appropriations from the Seminary funds. I have this year expended less than sixty dollars, a part of the proceeds of the spelling match, last November. Our library is now so much inferior to the art collection and science equipment, that its meagreness is very conspicuous, and the usefulness of the school will be impaired unless we devise some plan for its enlargement.

In marked contrast the art collection is on a most prosperous footing that adds much to the good name of our school as well as to the immediate value of the art study. The interest which the citizens of Exeter and the public generally manifest in our collection of art subjects is most gratifying to me. Many hundreds of visitors come to the Seminary each year, both in school sessions and out. Important additions have been made since last March from funds placed in my hands by the pupils of the school, the class of '94, Mrs. Ellis, and Mr. Wm. E. Merrill. A highly valued addition to the pictures in the chapel is an oil portrait of Mrs. Robinson, the mother of our founder, presented by the Robinson heirs through Dr. Abner L. Merrill. Valuable contributions have been made to the natural history cabinets by Mrs. H. H. Bancroft.

At the close of the last school year Miss Lillie C. Smith, our teacher of cooking, resigned to accept a more lucrative position in the public schools of Providence. Miss Smith was able to make a good beginning in the very important work of blending the application of the principles of chemistry, physics and physiology with the art of cooking.

As Miss Smith's successor we had the good fortune to secure Miss Anna Barrows, teacher of cooking at Lasell and editor of the "New England Kitchen." The cooking lessons are now given each Monday, elementary classes from ten to twelve o'clock, advanced class from two until four in the afternoon. I would like to take this opportunity to invite the mothers and friends of our girls to visit our cooking classes and become acquainted with Miss Barrows's methods of instruction.

In conclusion I desire to remind you that the hitherto youthful Seminary will in June have completed her first quarter century. Will it not be well to mark the event in some modest way, not so much in celebration of what she has accomplished in her first twenty-five years, but rather as a means of encouragement to press on to such an attainment as it is possible for her to reach in the next twenty-five years, with the co-operation of such officers as she now possesses, with the inspiration of such pupils as now gather within her walls, the encouragement of a body of alumnæ now numbering almost three hundred, and the helpfulness of such true friends as she is now winning from year to year?

With the opening of the library in its new and commodious building, September 24, 1894, the institution entered upon a new stage of existence, and its present increased usefulness revealed future possibilities of advancement. Many of the earlier visitors were drawn thither by curiosity, but very soon most of those who came to see, remained to study. As a rule, each month of the last quarter has witnessed an increase of reading-room patrons, and of applicants for books, to be used at home. If there have been fluctuations, or an apparent decline, exceptionally cold or stormy weather is to be credited with the fact, and the first pleasant days have fully made up for the temporary diminution of visitors.

The reading-room has been a marked success from the first, and seems equally popular with young and old. In November, 1,049 persons made use of it; in December, 917; in January, 1,190, and during the two weeks ending February 15, when the town's year closed, there were 592 readers. The largest number on any one day has been 85; on January 12. The daily average has been about 35. A good selection of periodicals and papers is open to the public, but additions will be made whenever the increase of the library will justify it.

As already said, the reading-room is a new feature, there being no accommodations and consequently no provision of the kind in the old quarters. Satisfactory, if brief experience has demonstrated that no department of the library should be more carefully fostered. Restricted to no class, it is especially pleasant to find the room so often filled in the evening by youths, who might otherwise wander about the streets, and by their elders whose home surroundings offer comparatively few attractions. The possibility of furnishing periodicals as well as books for home reading is soon to be tested.

The earlier half of the fiscal year was covered by a period in which removal was the prominent consideration. The chief energies of the librarian and the committee were devoted to classifying and renumbering the books, and entering their names on a card catalogue, which has been made to include all accessions to the present time. This work occupied many days, and involved the employment of some temporary assistants, as well as the co-operation of all the committee. The foundations were then laid for the printed catalogue, which, when provided, will prove an educator as well as a convenience. The manuscript card catalogue kept in drawers in the vestibule of the library, is an indispensable help, but not until a manageable volume is furnished will our citizens be fully informed as to the amount and variety of the information which is at their service.

The removal of the library was delayed by the non arrival of fixtures ordered from a distance—this delay being largely occasioned by strikes, which prevented the prompt fulfilment of contracts. The work of transfer was executed with much skill and despatch by the librarian, and Dr. C. H. Gerrish of the committee. The volumes went direct from their old places to the shelves for which they were designed, and this without any confusion or dumping upon the floor. An otherwise complicated undertaking was rendered simple and easy by careful adherence to a pre-arranged plan, and was completed at a cost of only $11.40.

The future may reveal new methods and marked improvements, but the experience of less than five months has demonstrated that even those who anticipated most good from a well planned library edifice builded better than they knew. The number of constant readers has increased, and is increasing, and while, as in all circulating libraries, there are more readers of fiction than of solid literature, there is a constant and growing demand for books of travel, biographies, histories, and even for profound scientific treatises. The number of reading cards now out is 1,171, and as most of the books go into families the total of readers is far from being covered by these figures. In November last, 1,548 books were called for; in December, 1,327 and in January, 1,718. The largest number of cards presented on any one day was 174. There is every reason for supposing that with each year our people will better appreciate the treasures of learning and genius open to their use, and as the shelves grow fuller the value of the collection will of course increase.

These facts and figures plainly show that Exeter has added to her Academy, Robinson Seminary and schools of different grades, what may be styled a People's University in which all, young and old, may build upon the foundations laid in their school education. Already the teachers of all our schools and seminaries have found in the library a most valuable auxiliary to their class-room instructions, and special arrangements have been made whereby this help can be utilized. The influence of eight thousand five hundred carefully chosen works, to which such additions as suggest themselves to the committee or to citizens, are frequently made, can hardly be over-estimated. Exeter will every year be a pleasanter town to live in, and among the inducements to removal hither, its library, already among the best in the state, will not be the least. The committee would ask a generous appropriation, not for lavish expenditure, for its members are as well aware of the stringency of the times as are any of their fellow citizens. They believe that the library should be provided with an income that will insure the fulfilment of the object which it is designed to secure. It is manifestly impossible to maintain afternoon and evening openings for six days in the week as cheaply as when the hours of service were only half as many, and when there was no reading room to light and heat. Yet economy has been carefully practiced and the expenditures of the library can be kept twenty-five or thirty per cent. lower than those just voted by the city of Nashua for similar purposes.

Besides the four hundred or more volumes purchased during the year the library has received gratuitous additions from public and private sources. Prominent among these last is a very interesting and otherwise unattainable collection of Exeter imprints and other rare works, ancient maps and various curios, mostly inclosed in a costly book-case, the bequest of the late Hon. C. H. Bell.

Mrs. John C. Long has also presented the library with the volumes of Littell's Living Age from its commencement in 1844 to near the present time. They have not yet been bound, but when this has been done, the library will have about two hundred volumes—four for each year—containing the cream of the English reviews and magazines for half a century.

To Professor B. L. Cilley, the library is indebted for a valuable set of Town Reports from 1863 and other documents containing materials indispensable to a thorough understanding of our local and state history.

Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Gorham have presented Raphael's Hours, a sumptuous work of art; a county history and other volumes.

The Rev. E. Goodridge has shown his interest in the library by gifts of books and magazines. Gifts of books and pamphlets from the nation, the state, and private donors other than those above mentioned are none the less appreciated because the present acknowledgement must be a general one.

During the past year the late Mrs. Harriett M. Merrill, a native of Exeter, but at the time of her death residing in Boston, bequeathed $2,000 to the library, the interest of which is to be used in the purchase of works of standard character. The gift was doubly gratifying, since it came unexpectedly, and showed that the interest already generously manifested by a member of the same family connection was not restricted to him. Dr. A. L. Merrill, her husband, has presented to the library the original of Sully's portrait of her uncle, the late William Robinson, a copy of which had already been furnished the Seminary that he founded. It now hangs in the reading-room. Apart from its personal interest as embodying the features of a distinguished citizen, it has high value as a rare work of art.

The Hon. E. G. Eastman, executor of the late Gen. Gilman Marston, has presented the library with Gen. Marston's gold hilted sword, and also his military saddle and accoutrements. The committee had hoped in this report to acknowledge the reception of Mr. Daniel French's bust of his father, the late Hon. Henry F. French, one of the founders of the library, but it has not yet arrived.

It is to be hoped that the examples of interest in the library, thus set forth, may provoke many of our well to do citizens to like good works. Few objects offer more immediate, general and permanent good. In enlarging the library, and furnishing it with means and resources, one provides for posterity as well as for his own generation. Bequests are good; yet many a man, acting as his own executor, can improve the collections of the library in the departments which he regards as most important. As the library expands, costly technical books will be more in demand by those who use it for study and not for mere entertainment. The wants of this class are important, but it would be asking too much of the town to include them in its appropriations. Their necessities must be met by funds like those contributed by the Merrills. The town of Exeter has manifested a wide generosity and enlightened liberality in giving the library a permanent home and in caring for its maintenance. If our citizens of wealth wish to raise it to a high rank among the libraries of the country, and to aid rich and poor alike in the search for knowledge, they should unite in its endowment. Judging the future by the past, we are sure that this beneficent help will not be withheld.
